Sayori (garfish) is a Nakadori Junmai the equivalent of drop of juice (naka=medium ; dori=take). We only take the liquid that breaks away after the first juices come out before it is squeezed. It is a sake that is characterised by its mineral nature. You notice straight away by your sense of smell.

Tense, mineral, sharp. Ideal to go all along the meal.

30cl - Alc. 14.5% Vol.

Sayori is Sharp and aniseed tasting. In your mouth it is the mineral and iodine notes that take over even if the frame remains supple and creamy. The final taste are long lasting and engulfing with notes of dried fruits which can be bitter and acidic. A large choice of combinations are possible with Sayori : with stronger tasting fish such as clinchards, maquirel, dashi broths or kombu, white or red grilled meat, saucy dishes, soft cheeses. Can be enjoyed at different temperatures cold or hot!
